NEW ENGLAND MENACED BY HIGH WATERS

While Storm Situation in South and Mid- West Improves

By United Press.

The storm situation in the south and mid-west was improved today but a new menace appeared in New England, where flood conditions imperiled hundreds of lives.

A small village was wiped out and great property damage caused by the bursting of two dams in New Hampshire. Rivers were rising in Maine and Vermont.

A check of the storm damage in seven southern states east of the Mississippi showed 38 persons dead, nearly 200 injured, and widespread damage to property and crops.

After 24 hours of gales on the Great Lakes shipping was beginning to move cautiously. Two vessels were aground in Lake Erie and a disabled passenger ship was towed to port.

The eastern seaboard reported heavy damage from continued rains.

SAVE FREIGHTER'S CREW.

Buffalo, N. Y., May 4.—(UP)—The Thunder Bay Island coast guard station reported to district headquarters here that nine men, comprising the crew of the freighter, O. E. Parks, reported sinking four miles east of Thunder Bay Island in Lake Huron, had been taken off the stricken vessel today. The rescue of the men was effected during a high sea.

RESCUE PASSENGERS.

Ashtabula, O., May 4.—(AP)—The City of Erie, passenger boat of the Cleveland-Ashtabula Transit Lines, this morning took aboard the 50 passengers of the disabled City of Buffalo at the Ashtabula harbor and proceeded to Cleveland.

The passengers were more than a day overdue in Cleveland. They had spent the night aboard the City of Buffalo, anchored ten miles northeast of Ashtabula, after drifting from Cleveland yesterday morning. The tug Virginia and Gilmore towed the City of Buffalo into port here for repairs and refueling. The vessel expected to proceed to Cleveland later under her own power, is possible.

FLOODS IN NEW ENGLAND.

Colebrook, N. H., May 4.—(AP)—The Hoback River valley stretching from the Connecticut River eastward toward Diville Notch presented a scene of flood wrought havoc today. Houses and bridges were swept away and highways washed out when waters rushed last night from Balsam Dam, 13 miles above here. The dam burst from pressure due to heavy rain.

Estimates of property damage ranged as high as $100,000. The river, ordinarily a comparatively shallow stream, rose 20 feet in a few minutes and maintained that gauge nearly half an hour.

Damage here was heavy. Eight or nine houses disappeared in the river.

CHECK TORNADO'S TOLL.

Atlanta, Ga., May 4.—(AP)—The death list from the tornadoes that struck seven southern states Wednesday and Thursday stood today at 38, with the greatest toll in Virginia, where 21 persons lost their lives.

Relief workers, penetrating the isolated sections yesterday, saw the death list mount above forty and then drop again, due to conflicting and overlapping reports.

In addition to the dead, more than 100 persons were injured, many of them seriously, and an enormous crop and property toll was taken.

The greatest loss of life was at Rye Cove, Va., where 11 children and a teacher were killed in the collapse of a school house. Ten other persons were killed in widely scattered sections of the state.

MISSISSIPPI RISING.

St. Louis, Mo., May 4.—(UP)—Residents of the central Mississippi valley today had returned their attention to the menace of high waters, relieved that few crops had been harmed by frost-bite in the wintry May weather.

Weather bureau officials forecast a stage of 33 feet, three feet above flood stage, at St. Louis and corresponding levels throughout the district from Alton, Ill., to New Madrid, Mo., beginning Saturday at Alton and finally extending far to the south by the end of next week.

Little damage is expected however. The rapid melting of the four to six inch snow storm in Missouri, Arkansas and northeastern Oklahoma and intermittent rains throughout the district sent rivers rising again, just as they were lowering to below flood levels from the floods of two weeks ago.

Clouds Saved Crops.

The only danger, apparently, was that some levees might become water-logged because of the long-continued pressure which has been constant since early March.

Farm bureau experts reported yesterday.

GANGSTER HELD GUILTY IN SUR- PRISE VERDICT

Geo. Maloney Convicted of Granada Cafe Double Murder

Chicago, May 4.—(UP)—A surprise verdict, returned in Chief Justice John J. Sullivan's court room in Criminal Court here today, declared George Maloney, gangster, guilty of murder. The jury set the penalty at 14 years imprisonment. The conviction was due almost entirely to the new science of ballistics.

Maloney was charged with the murder of Hugh "Stubby" McGovern and Gunner McPadden in the Granada Cafe. About 200 persons saw the shooting.

The verdict was a complete reversal of the jury which stood at 11 to 1 for not guilty when deliberating ceased last night. In the first hour of consideration this morning the trend reacted to the guilty.

Assistant State's Attorney Charles J. Mueller had not expected a guilty verdict. Only one witness, a policeman, testified for the state. Exhibits were presented however, showing the bullets which killed McGovern were from Maloney's gun.

It was the first gangster conviction of murder under the regime of State's Attorney John A. Swanson.

Judge John P. McGorty heard testimony in the trial but was absent when the verdict was returned today.

Friday was set as a date for arguments for a new trial. Meanwhile Maloney was allowed to go free on his $50,000 bond.

U. S.-GERMANY AGREED UPON REPARATIONS

All But France and Belgium Satisfied With Program

Paris, May 4.—(AP)—The German and American reparations delegations have reached a full agreement on a complete settlement of the reparations problem. It remains however for the Americans to win the French and Belgian delegations to their plan.

Owen D. Young, chief of the American delegation, today was conferring with the delegations of the other creditor nations to this end.

The British and the Japanese delegations were stated authoritatively tentatively to have approved the settlement, leaving France and Belgium particularly and possibly Italy dissenting.

The final decision of course rested with France, far and away the largest creditor.

Plenary Session Monday? If conferences today are favorable it was believed there will be a plenary session Monday, when various of the reparations experts who have left Paris will have returned.

It was said there were naturally many details to be arranged yet but the broad outline of the plan was well defined.

The proposed settlement just about splits the difference between the original German offer of annuities of 1,650,000,000 marks and the allied demand of annuities of 2,200,000,000 marks.

The German offer, calculated five per cent interest plus nine tenths per cent for amortization, had a present value of about 26,000,000,000 gold marks (about $6,240,000,000). The allied demand amounted roughly to 30,000,000,000 marks, totalling, when costs of the army of Rhine occupation and redemption of Belgian currency was added, about 41,000,000,000 marks (about $10,000,000,000).

The settlement agreed upon by the Americans and the Germans provides for annuities to run only 37 years. The payments of 1,750,000,000 marks needed for the succeeding 21 years to meet the debts of the allied countries to America would be met by the international bank from its profits.

Resigned Attorney Takes Fourth Hobby

Peoria, Ill., May 4.—(UP)—Mrs. Gertrude Warner, who recently resigned as Assistant U. S. District Attorney and Robert Allen, 70, of South Bend, Ind., who was head of the construction department of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana before he retired, are on their honeymoon today.

They were quietly married yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Warner's son, Gerald Warner.

Shortly afterward Mr. and Mrs. Allen left by train for Chicago. They will start a motor trip from there. Their future home probably will be in Florida.

GASOLINE STOVE EXPLODES AND CHILDREN BURN

New Castle, Pa., May 4.—(UP)—Three children were trapped in their beds and burned to death today when a gasoline stove exploded in their home here and the house was destroyed by fire.

The dead were children of Mr. and Mrs. William Stevens, Dorothy, 14, William, 13, and Virginia, 9. The mother escaped with her four-year-old daughter, Eleanor, but they were burned seriously. They were taken to a hospital.

Stevens, an electrical company employee and the oldest daughter, Margaret, 19, had left the house for work when the explosion and fire occurred.

FIRE KILLS THREE

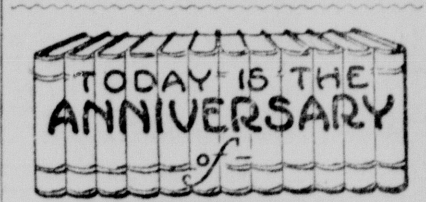

Lebanon, O., May 4.—(UP)—Mrs. Frank Carter died today raising to three the death toll of an explosion of a stove and fire at the Carter home last night.

The other victims were two sons, Willard, 2, and Harold, two months. Paul, 4, another son, was near death.

I. C. ENGINEER KILLED

Decatur, Ill., May 4.—(UP)—Caught in the mechanism of his own locomotive, Delmar W. Boggs, Illinois Central engineer, was killed here yesterday night. Boggs, who was standing on the ground, was oiled the radius rod of the locomotive when the accident occurred.

Boggs's fireman who feared an approaching locomotive would crash into the standing switch engine, jumped into the cab, rang the bell as a warning to Boggs and pulled the reverse lever. The lifting rod caught Boggs against the lower jaw and crushed his head against the mechanism above him. He died within a few minutes.

A $24 PURCHASE

Today is the anniversary of the most historic real estate transaction in history—the purchase of Manhattan Island from the Indians for the equivalent of about $24.

This purchase, made on May 4, 1624, was the crowning event in the other use inconspicuous administration of Peter Minuit, director general of the New Amsterdam colony.

The island, now the skyscraper district of New York, is 13 miles long and has a maximum width of two and a quarter miles, and an area of 22 square miles. Its population is now more than 2,500,000, and its assessed valuation is fabulous.

It came is supposed to have originated with Henry Hudson, who referred to the hostile Indians he found on it, as "Manahata." Later they were called "Manhattan Indians," as if they were a distinct tribe, but historians say that they were a branch of the Delawares.

Since they were unfriendly to the Dutch settlers, the Indians probably drove as hard a bargain as possible and felt that the 60 guilders worth of merchandise they received was a good price.

INDICT 124 IN COOK COUNTY CRIME DRIVE

President and Trustees in Sanitary District On List

Chicago, May 4.—(AP)—Six police captains indicted by the April grand jury as participants in the slot machine conspiracy obviated suspension from the force today by requesting leaves of absence. Police Commissioner Russell granted the leaves, effective Monday.

Chicago, May 4.—(UP)—Chicago's long-heralded revolt against gangsterism, racketeering and political corruption graduated today from a campaign promise to a state of accomplishment.

At the end of a week of county and federal grand jury action, against 124 men, citizens who long ago refused to take any stock in "clean-up" promises awake to find the following results of the law's work:

1.—Eighty-one persons indicted for alleged conspiracy in the Chicago Heights liquor ring which is alleged to have produced $36,000,000 worth of alcohol in four years and to have been responsible for a majority of the 68 gang murders committed in and near the suburb.

2.—Fifteen men, including the former president and six members of the present board of the Chicago Sanitary District indicted on charges of conspiracy and embezzlement to taxpayers' money.

3.—Twenty-eight men, including six police captains and several powerful politicians, indicted for alleged conspiracy in a slot machine and gambling syndicate which assertedly paid as high as $25,000 a day in graft and protection money.

4.—Disclosure of a widespread traffic in machine guns by the employment of ballistics—a scientific study of firearms—in the investigation of the St. Valentine's day massacre which threatens to seriously hamper gangland's access to its favorite method of assassination.

5.—A move to break the control of political bosses by reappointment of several wards including the "Bloody Twenties" which has been ruled by "Boss" Eller and his henchmen for several years.

The outstanding accomplishment was the county grand jury indictments in the Sanitary District scandal. Former President T. J. Crowe and six trustees are charged with staging "wild liquor parties" with taxpayers' money to a total of approximately a quarter of million dollars. The charges recall a trial of champagne and "whoopie" which started out as a flood relief committee to Washington in 1927 and ended in a $6,900 breakage party at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York. Evidence taken from the district records indicated that $1,700 was paid to a German newspaperman for a honey-moon trip to Austria.

The indictment of six police captains and officials for alleged connection with the slot machine syndicate was accompanied by a threat of possible indictment of 24 more. Those named by the county grand jury were alleged to have paid and received large sums of graft money.

The Chicago Heights liquor ring federal indictment gave startling figures on alcohol manufacture and linked the names of police heads, former and present officials. A chief of police, two former chiefs and other officers were included among the defendants. They were charged with 70 other acts against the prohibition law. Seventy-five were cited in the large brewer's indictment. The action constituted the most serious threat the law yet has made against the power of "Scarface Al" Capone, overlord of beer and vice.

The terror of witnesses who have appeared in the gang massacre inquest testified to the growing fear of the methods employed by the new regime under State's Attorney John Swanson. The ballistics experts have traced a large number of machine guns which have been sold openly to gangsters and claim to have identified two members of the massacre squad through the new methods.

The reappointment move follows closely on other efforts to break up the Eller control. Eller, his son and 15 aides were indicted for alleged conspiracy to violate the election law, kidnapping murder and various primary violence crimes. Trials are not yet concluded.

As an added proof of the law's tightening was the week's record of criminal Judge Denis J. Normoyle which showed conviction and sentence of every defendant brought before him during the week.

SENATE OPENS PROBE.

Chicago, May 4.—(UP)—The Illinois state senate committee investigating the Chicago Sanitary Board prepared today to examine alleged "whoopie" records of the sanitary service company involving president of the Sanitary Board of trustees and 14 others including six present members, arranged for $210,000 bond to escape going to jail.

Memphis, Tenn., May 4.—(UP)—Three persons, a man, a woman and a small child, were drowned just across the river from here today when their automobile plunged through a railing on Harahan viaduct into 15 feet of backwater from the Mississippi River.

Divers were sent for in an effort to recover the bodies. The driver apparently lost control while trying to pass another automobile on the viaduct.

Another crib is now about ready to be pumped out and cleared, ready for the pile driving operations. About a week or ten days will be necessary before the concrete for the next footing can be poured. The work is progressing rapidly with the stage of water reaching a normal level for this time of the year.

TWO SPLENDID NEW FEATURES FOR THE TELEGRAPH MON.

"Buck" Rogers and Dr. Brady Will Merit Your Attention

Starting Monday The Evening Telegraph will present to its readers two new daily features which we confidently believe will prove of unusual interest—an illustrated delineation of the imaginative adventures of Buck Rogers, a Dixon young man who in 2429 A. D.—500 years in the future—becomes an aviator and encounters almost unbelievable situations; and up-to-the-minute health articles by Dr. William Brady, famous physician and author.

"Buck Rogers," the creation of Philip Nowlan and Richard Calkins, is an illustrated continued story on the order of Jules Verne and authors of his imaginative trend. It is intensely interesting and will hold the attention of the young and old alike.

Dr. Brady's perfect health service, in addition to furnishing authoritative articles on general health conditions, will also provide a department wherein readers of The Telegraph can obtain free advice on their own health problems, simply by writing him in care of The Telegraph. Both of these brand new features will start in Monday's Telegraph.

Think Crops Unhurt By Illinois Storm

Springfield, Ill., May 4.—(UP)—The unreasonable weather which swept through central Illinois Thursday, leaving a blanket of snow and almost freezing temperatures in its wake, failed to damage crops of the section to any great extent, weather bureau officials stated here today.

Agricultural experts agreed that no serious damage had resulted from the May snow-storm but that the heavy rains in some sections will hamper field work.

RAINS BLOCK ROADS

East St. Louis, Ill., May 4.—(UP)—The principal highway between this city and Collinsville, Route No. 11, was closed today because of heavy rains.

BERLIN MAY DAY DEATHS REACHED 27

State of Siege Still in Force in Riotous Districts

Berlin, May 4.—(AP)—The number of dead in the Communist May Day disorders of the past three days reached 27 today with the deaths of six wounded persons in various hospitals.

Of the deaths, 25 were reported officially while two were not officially listed.

Among the dead was Charles Erau Mackay, an English newspaperman, who was shot in the Neukoelln district shortly before dawn today while walking in the Hermannstrasse contrary to police orders.

Another victim of the journalistic profession was Paul Weymar of the Vossische Zeitung who was shot in the leg last night. His wound was not serious.

In all more than 150 persons have been injured in the fighting since May Day. The Neukoelln and Wedding districts, where all of the disorders have taken place, were still in a state of siege today.

There was further fighting in the Neukoelln district early last night, but this faded out with the coming of morning.

A force of 450 policemen was thrown around the area early this morning and house-to-house searches for weapons were resumed.

The police were of the opinion that the back bone of the insurgent movement could be broken in the course of the day as the Risters appeared to be completely exhausted.

Street cars passing through the siege area did not stop at the usual places, but proceeded to the first corner beyond the region.

BY MAURITZ HALGREN

United Press Staff Correspondent

Berlin, May 4.—(UP)—Berlin police threw barbed-wire entanglements around the bloody Neukoelln district today to aid them in their efforts to end Communist outbreaks which in the last 24 hours added five more to the growing list of dead. This brought to 27 the total known May Day disorders, according to official announcement, but there were reports that the Communists, in keeping with the rules of their organization, had hidden other dead.

The police department claimed to have the situation well in hand, but there is still a grim air of warfare around the workers' area of Neukoelln. The barbed wire entanglements were reminiscent of the post-war Spartacus revolt period when blood flowed freely in Berlin.

C. E. Mackay, a correspondent for the Waikiki, New Zealand, Daily News, was the latest victim of the bloody uprising. He was found by police in the restricted area during the night, with a bullet wound in his chest. How he was shot, or by whom or when was not known. He died in a hospital.

A German newspaperman also was seriously wounded during the past 24 hours. The other deaths were those of three women, all of whom were killed when they stepped to the balconies of their own homes, and a male noncombatant who happened to be crossing the street.

The police continued their vigilance after nightfall, placing one or more officers at each house in the Neu Koelln district. They had order to shoot without warning at all persons seen opening windows or lighting the lights in rooms facing the streets. For a while order was apparently restored.

The cafes in the restricted district were ordered closed. Reinforcements arrived when the streets grew dark. Even these extreme precautions failed to prevent the sniping from behind darkened windows and from the house tops.

The disorders were renewed when the police attempted to search houses for arms and ammunition. They did succeed in confiscating some of the ammunition, but snipers gave the police much trouble and they had to withdraw.

Saline Co. is Free of Bovine T. B. Now

Harrisburg, Ill., May 4.—(UP)—Saline county boasted the distinction today of recognition from both federal and state agricultural experts as being entirely free from tuberculosis cattle.

The area was officially classed as a modified accredited area in the terms of stock-raising experts. The action provides that all cattle entering the county hereafter must submit to regulation tuberculosis tests.

S. J. Stanard, Director of the State Department of Agriculture, and other state officials spoke at a meeting of celebration sponsored by the Harrisburg Kiwanis Club here last night.

During a single hailstorm in India, in 1888, about 250 persons were killed.

More than 6500 miles of pipe are needed to distribute London's water supply.

Mountain Guide to Die for Murder of Friend Late in June

Speculator, N. Y., May 4—(AP)—Ernest Duane, mountain guide, found guilty of murder for the confessed shooting of Eula Davis, his aged friend, was sentenced to die in the electric chair at Sing Sing in the week of June 24. Duane was once guide for Gene Tunney.

Supreme Court Justice Christopher B. Hoffman wept when he passed sentence. Duane admitted shooting Davis, and taking a few hundred dollars, the aged guide's savings, but claimed he was in an epileptic dream.

Marion Talley in Swan Song Tonight

Cleveland, May 4—(UP)—A young coloratura soprano, who made her debut in grand opera three years ago in New York will sing her swan song tonight in public hall here.

Miss Marion Talley, the Metropolitan Opera Company's youngest prima donna, will say goodbye to grand opera tonight when she sings the leading role in "Lucia di Lammermoor."

Miss Talley expects to retire to a middle western farm. She did not specify what kind of a farm she will have although she expressed a preference for a chicken farm "on an extensive scale."

The opera stage never will hear her again, she told the United Press, although she will continue to make phonograph records. A contract with one company still has two more years to run and she will keep her voice in practice for that reason. But she is adamant in her decision not to sing on the stage again.

Illinois Briefs

Champaign-Urbana, Ill., May 4—(UP)—Although organized as a separate unit less than two years ago, the University of Illinois School of Journalism today ranks sixth in enrollment among the 58 schools and departments of journalism in the United States, a report compiled by Prof. Lawrence W. Murphy, acting director, reveals.

Listed as one of the 18 class A journalism schools in the country, the University of Illinois school now has 92 students, its enrollment being exceeded only by the University of Missouri, Ohio State, Columbia university, the University of Michigan and the University of Wisconsin. In addition to the 92 full-time students the Illinois department gives instruction to 500 other students from other departments in the University in one or more journalism subjects.

Registration figures for the Illinois school evidence remarkable strides, the report shows. Enrollment at the end of its second year shows a greater gain than many other Class A schools have displayed over a period of five or ten years.

"Tendencies in journalistic education are toward increased education in Class A schools, that is, in those schools whose departments meet the standards of the National Association of Schools and Colleges of Journalism," Prof. Murphy said. The trend is also toward the stabilization of enrollment, and the raising of scholastic standards."

Springfield, Ill., May 4—(UP)—"Missouri Meerschaums," made from corn cobs grown in Illinois, may play a more important part in the pipe market of the country as the result of promotional work now underway in Morgan and surrounding counties. Cob pipe manufacturing plants plan to invade the Illinois cornbelt country to get material for Missouri factories.

Forrest Fisher, Morgan county farm adviser, in touch with officials of the Illinois Department of Agriculture, relays the information given him by pipe factory representatives in order that corn growers throughout Illinois may look into the possibilities of growing corn for pipe production purposes.

"The prevailing prices for corn cobs that meet pipe factory requirements are one-half per cent cob," Fisher states. "The industry has developed breeds of corn that are ideal for use in making pipes. In a limited way, a few Illinois farmers have successfully produced pipe cobs for Missouri manufacturers. Extension of this specialized production may prove profitable in some sections of Illinois. Good soil, and a season that enables late varieties of corn to mature are the chief requirements."

The corn cob pipe is primarily a Missouri product. Factories at Washington and Union, Missouri, are listed as producing 95% of the world's supply of corn cob pipes. They seek wider sources for their raw material.

Pipe cob specifications require that cobs must not be less than one and three-quarters inches in diameter. In their preparation, the cobs pass from the sheller over a conveyor that serves as a sorting table. Trained pipe cob "pickers" select the ones that are suitable for conversion into bowls wherein "the weed" can be consumed with that peculiar satisfaction, that addicts to the Missouri Meerschaum enjoy.

SENATE'S VOTE ON DEBENTURE COMING MONDAY

One or Two Senators to Hold Balance of Power in That Body

Washington, May 4—(AP)—President Hoover was informed today by Senator Watson of Indiana, the Republican leader, that a very close vote was expected on the export debenture plan which the President opposes as a part of his farm relief program.

Senator Watson, however expressed confidence that administration forces would be able to defeat the plan. Returning to the Capitol he immediately summoned a conference of party leaders to lay plans for the vote which is expected to be reached Monday.

Watson also informed the President that if, as he believed, the debenture proposition would be eliminated from the farm bill, he looked for a determined move to incorporate the plan in the tariff bill when it reaches the Senate.

Democrats have lined up almost solidly to the debenture proposal and a number of Republican independents have announced they intend to support it.

Two Hold Balance

At the meeting attended by Senator Watson and called by Senator McNary of Oregon, Senator Fess of Ohio and other administration leaders, it was said a check of the Senate membership showed the division so close that one or two senators who have not definitely made up their minds, were considered as holding the balance of power.

Administration leaders were optimistic, however, that a last minute switch, on the basis of the argument that the adoption of the debenture plan would delay farm relief legislation, would swell the total of votes against the plan.

Meanwhile, the debenture advocates also were losing no time in cementing their ranks. They planned to obtain a "pair" for Senator Shipstead, Farmer-Labor, Minnesota, who is ill in a Baltimore hospital, if possible with Senator Walsh, Democrat, Massachusetts, who is opposed to the debenture plan, or if that move failed, with some other opponent, so that Shipstead's absence would not diminish their vote.

Senator McNary, who has the farm bill in charge, planned no vote on the debenture section today. It likely will be taken Monday with a final vote on the bill itself Tuesday or Wednesday.</

Lady Astor Faces Two Foes at Polls

London, May 4—(UP)—Lady Astor, first woman to sit in the Imperial Parliament, will have to defeat both Liberal and Labor candidates in the next election if she wishes to retain her seat.

William Westwood, who began life in a Dundee jute mill, is to be the Labor candidate in the Sutton Division of Plymouth, and Thomas Henry Aggett of Teignmouth (pronounced Timmouth), will seek to win the seat for the Liberals.

Aggett is president of the League of Young Liberals in Teignmouth and in 36 years old. He carries on business as a printer. Westwood, who has been secretary of his Union in the jute industry and political secretary to the Scottish Labor Party, unsuccessfully contested Berth in 1922. He is 48.

It will be recalled that it was recently intimated that Lady Astor's particular interests were being opposed by certain members of the House of Commons. It was never revealed exactly what persons were against her desire to see an increase in temperance reform, fair play for women in industry, and more active measures to suppress white slavery, but it is believed that some would not be sorry to see the American-born peeress defeated. It was hinted that her opponents could be found on both sides of the house.

Well-informed quarters, however, declare there is little doubt that Lady Astor will retain the seat she has held since 1919.

WOMAN SUCCESSFUL AS MINE OPERATOR

Pittsburgh—(AP)—Operating a coal mine and saw mill is part of the day's work for Miss Margaret B. Barnett of Pittsburgh. She sells a load of lumber with the nonchalance of a salesgirl disposing of a hat.

When head of a medical institution in Pittsburgh which mined its own coal, Miss Barnett conceived the idea of owning a mine herself.

She acquired a half interest in a large tract of coal land in Somerset county and proceeded to mine it. She hired the men, secured the railroad siding and superintended the drilling. High boots and slickers were her habitual garb. The mine proved successful.

Encouraged by her success with coal, she procured a timber tract and took entire charge of cutting the lumber and selling it.

GOLDEN RULE CLASS WILL MEET TUESDAY

A Luncheon Menu

Pimento Salads, Serving Six (Very Effective)

2 tablespoons granulated gelatin.
4 tablespoons cold water
1 1-2 cups boiling water
3 tablespoons lemon juice
12 teaspoon salt.
1 tablespoon sugar
6 pimentos
12 cup diced celery
12 cup cooked peas
1 teaspoon finely chopped onions.
1 tablespoon salad dressing
Soak the gelatin and cold water for 5 minutes, add the boiling water and stir until the gelatin has dissolved. Add the boiling water, lemon juice, salt and sugar. Open a can of pimentos and carefully remove them so they will not break. Mix the rest of the ingredients and fill the pimentos. Set each filled pimento in a cup and cover with the gelatin mixture. Chill and when ready to serve carefully unmold on lettuce leaves and surround with mayonnaise.

Chantilly Pudding, Serving Six
24 lady fingers
1 qt. vanilla ice cream
1 cup stiffly whipped cream
1 cup preserved pineapple
6 red cherries
Place four lady fingers in each glass serving cup, add portions of the ice cream. Top with the whipped cream, pineapple and cherries. Serve at once.

For variety a few (13 cups) of chopped nuts can be sprinkled over the top of mashed potatoes after they have been placed in the serving dish.

One-eighth teaspoon of cream of tartar added to two cups of sugar used in boiled icing will aid in preventing it from becoming "grainy."

A custard pie is less liable to become "soaked" if the crust is baked for 8 minutes in a moderate oven before the uncooked filling is added. This also applies to the baking of pumpkin pies.

Final Meeting of Prairieville P. T. A. Held Thursday

(Contributed)
The last meeting of the school year was held by the Prairieville P. T. A. on Thursday evening, May 2 with an attendance of about 90.

The program was opened by the primary room "orchestra" accompanied by the victrola with Myron Lawrence directing.

This was followed by the reading of secretary's and treasurer's reports. The primary room pupils then sang "The Cricket Band" in their usual pleasing style. Warren and Wayne Friedrichs sang a song together and responded to an encore. Wayne alone sang a second encore number. They were enthusiastically applauded.

The evening's address was delivered by Robert Hallenberg of Dixon, who is Director of Public Relations with the Illinois Northern Utilities Company. His theme was, "Things of Today." The speaker introduced his subject in a pleasing way, showing that in considering the things of today one always calls to mind the changes which have come about during recent years making present day conditions possible. He showed that the manufacturer can adjust the output of his product to the demand, and that his production has a definite relation to the supply of raw materials. This is not true in the case of crop production.

People are now buying with regard to service or "usability" of an article, and are using a great many things and services of all kinds which were not in use until very recently. A few generations ago each household produced or made nearly all of the things it used. The industrial era began with the introduction of mechanical power, and workmen became specialists, each having one particular part of the work to perform. This has meant increased production, and a greater selling effort to create a desire for the many articles not in use a short time ago.

ing the program, thanked all officers, committees and members for their co-operation during the year. The hospitality committee served refreshments of ice cream and cake.

Plaids Are Casting Their Shadow at the French Races

BY FRANCES PAGET
Copyright, 1929, by Style Sources

New York, May 2—(UP)—Prophecy is already busy with predictions of a vogue for plaid, although it is not expected much before fall. There are, however, many signs indicating that there is already a feeling for plaid in more or less incidental forms.

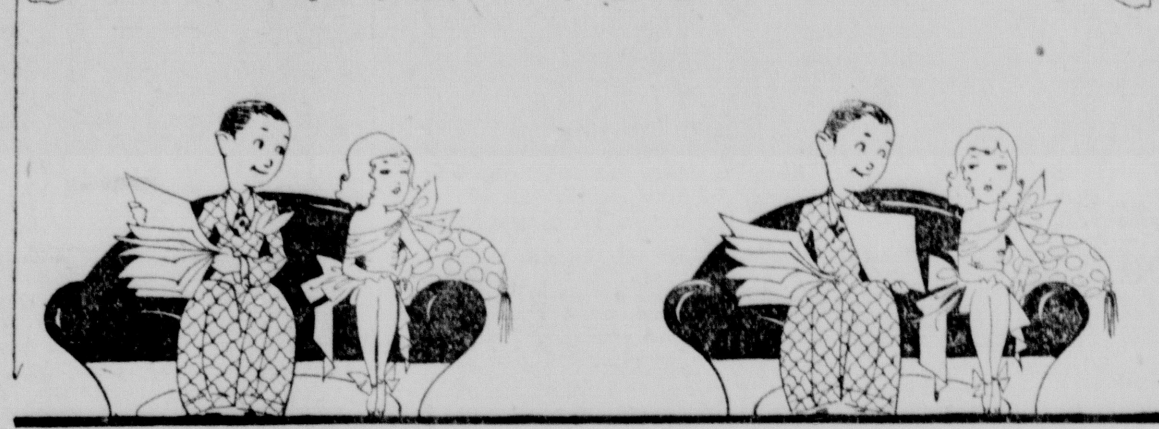

The Paris races gave impetus to the demand for plaid straw and felt hats, a novelty which has captured the Parisienne and one which is beginning to be appreciated here. Plaids are unquestionably smart in straw hats and in certain dress fabrics.

The plaid theme is the newest and most interesting pattern to develop in fall woollens, plaids of fair size suggesting the spacing of Scotch firms but not adhering necessarily to their coloring.

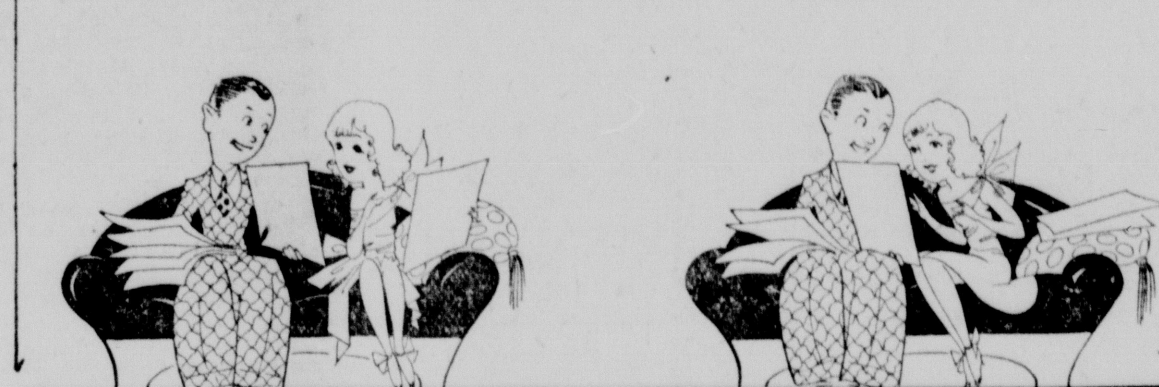

One sees already advance style spirits preaching the vogue by appearing ahead of the rest of the world in a plaid suit or a plaid coat, as they have already done in New York. We must remember, too, that plaids have found their way into straw hats this season, and plaid chignons hint at a summer forerunner of this mode. Woolen plaid scarfs of the Rodier order are being effectively worn on plain tweed coats, and trimmings of plaids follow the lead of the scarf. Then there are the shadow plaids on the new velvets which further carry out the belief in these designs. The belief that the small conventional and floral patterns have been played to surfeit acts as an agreeable impetus to the idea of large refreshing plaid designs.

amusing bit of style gossip from Paris has to do with the acceptance of shorts. At the Molyneux mid-season opening a group of beach frocks were launched, these frocks having matching shirts made of the same material as the frock. The shorts were the regulation tailored French pantie with fitted yoke across the front and elastic across the back.

"Johnny, turn out the light in your room and study down stairs."

"Why?"

"Because I say so."

"Johnny, don't run the lawn mower over the grass near the rose bed."

"Why?"

"Because I say so."

If you talk to the children at your house that way, there's a very strong probability that you are having the same trouble that Johnny's mother is having with him—disobedience.

I'm sorry to say that the more child specialists urge the opposite the more determined certain parents seem to demand "unquestioning obedience," probably in the erroneous belief that it makes the best children. Most mistakes of the sort are well meant, they have the best intentions in the world behind them, but this is no exception.

Child's Faith Necessary
For I take the liberty of calling "unquestioning obedience," or rather the demand for it, a mistake; that is, when it implies that all obedience must be unquestioned. A child should have faith in his parents, of course, so that when he receives a peremptory command he should obey it. It isn't of course always necessary to tell him why. Indeed in certain things I should demand it.

But if it becomes a habit with his parents to boss him day out and day in with never an explanation, need less to say that faith won't last. Then, of course, rebellion follows. That is why parents who expect children to obey blindly defeat their own purpose. The chances are ten to one that they won't have obedience at all—unless they resort to frightening the children by threats and punishment. I suppose this submission obtained by police methods, is called obedience—it has to be called something, but it isn't my idea of it.

Obedience that isn't willing that isn't acceptable to a child, and that doesn't square up with his notion of justice, is not worthy of the name. If it causes sourness, sulks, resentment, and a sly aliveness to break over when opportunity offers—who wants it?

If you don't answer when Jimmy asks you "why" he must keep the mower off the grass, and say only, "Because I say so," it isn't enough. He isn't being impertinent. He really has a right to know.

The WOMAN'S DAY

by ALLENE GILBERT

"Slaves of the Gods," by Katherine Mayo, is her rebuttal to the storm of criticism which greeted her former "Mother India." But with all the revivings and denunciations and insistences that she spoke but half truths in that book, combed India for only its wrongs, and found them, just as one could compile a similar book by looking at the cesspools of any nation, she clings to her point, and the new book gives no jot nor tittle to her critics.

There is something rather magnificent in sticking to one's theme, no matter what the protests. Some might call it stubbornness, but I like Katherine Mayo's consistency better than the rather weak explanations, for instance, which Joan Lowell is now putting about to explain the fibs of her book. Utter denial would have been a bit more magnificent.

CANDY AND LIMOUSINES
When he found five cents' worth of candy in his sweetheart's room, and knew that the bag of sweets had been given her by his rival, Harry Klym of Brooklyn shot and fatally wounded the girl.

Human passions seem rather monotonous the same. In the same day's news some other sweetheart shot his girl when he discovered her riding in the new limousine given her by another sweetie. Five cents' worth of candy of limousines, all the same! It's the principle that counts!

LURE OF THE ANTIQUE
The National Woman's Party, after being reluctantly ousted from its headquarters in the historic "Old Brick Capitol," which was our Capitol following the raid of Washington by the British, has purchased another historical and antique building for headquarters. The new building is said to be the oldest house in Washington, built by Lord Baltimore for his daughter in 1772, and set fire to by British soldiers in 1814.

One wonders if this craze for the old, the historic, is just a modern fad, or if our funny peas-in-a-pod brick bungalow with laundry chutes will be as prized in 2500 A. D. or long ere that?

CONJECTURE ON WEDDING PLANS OF LINDY-ANNE

Rumors About Early Marriage Rife: Principles are Silent

Englewood, N. J., May 4—(AP)—Many varied rumors as to the time and place of the approaching marriage of Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh and Miss Anne Morrow were rife today, but complete silence was maintained by all interested parties.

Rumors were that the marriage would take place in Paris; at the Morrow summer home at North Haven, Me.; at the Morrow home here, and that it would be much earlier than the June date tentatively set. But on none of these rumors would members of the Morrow family or Colonel Lindbergh comment.

Strength to the report that an early marriage was planned was seen in the departure from her home in Detroit of Mrs. Evangeline Lindbergh, the Colonel's mother. Her destination couldn't be learned and at her home comment was refused on reports that she was coming on a visit to the Morrow home here.

That Colonel Lindbergh, however, was planning an early airplane flight was indicated in a report from Mitchell Field, Long Island, that his Curtiss Falcon-Biplane had been overhauled, fueled and prepared for immediate service.

The Colonel was a dinner guest at the Morrow home last night. He arrived shortly before 7 P. M., and left about 15 minutes later with Miss Morrow for a 30-minute ride in his automobile. Upon their return Lindbergh smiled and waved his hat to the assembled newspapermen and photographers, but did not stop.

Wedding of April 20th. Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Hinricks near Compton, announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Florence Marie, to Albert Allan Beede, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Beede of near Dixon, which took place Saturday evening, April twentieth, at the First Methodist Episcopal parsonage in Sterling.

Rev. Milton Dawson Bayley, former pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church at Compton, officiating in the presence of the attendants, a sister of the bride and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Miller of Dixon, the simple but beautiful rite ceremony being used at this time.

The bride was charming in a gown of Chinese blue georgette crepe trimmed in beige. She wore bridal beads of the same shade, a gift from the bridegroom, and her hat and accessories were in harmonizing shades of beige. Her maid of honor wore a frock of shell pink, and both wore corsage bouquets of bride's roses. The bride's traveling gown was in soft shades of tan.

After a short honeymoon the couple returned to the bride's parents home near Compton where a delicious wedding dinner was served in their honor, the immediate relatives being the guests.

The bride has been one of Lee county's successful and faithful school teachers, having had the Beemerville school near Compton for the past five years. Her term there closes next Wednesday. She is a graduate of the Compton and Rochelle high schools and also attended the Northern Illinois State Teacher College at DeKalb.

The bridegroom attended the Dixon high school and Coppins Commercial School in Dixon, and he is at present employed in the construction department of the State Highway Department.

The newlyweds will make their home in Dixon and hosts of friends will extend very best wishes for their happiness and success.

NEWS CHURCHES

INDIA IN STORY AND PICTURES
Tomorrow night Rev. M. L. Dolbeer a friend of Rev. Carl B. Caughman, our missionary in India, will speak in St. Paul's Lutheran church.

Too many of us know too little of the work of Christ in India or any other country, our own included, for that matter. For that reason we are half hearted and only half loyal to Him.

It will be worth much to us to know this man and to hear him. He is among the younger men of our workers in India. He sees the work through the eyes of youth. This angle of vision should also have consideration.

In his talk he will use pictures thrown on a screen to enforce and elucidate the truth. We shall go with him to the heart of the work and will enjoy and appreciate the journey.

"DRACULA"
Is Proving to be the Most Sensational Success Chicago Has Had in Years at the Blackstone, Chicago.

"Dracula," the vampire mystery play that Horace Liveright is presenting at the Blackstone theatre, is proving to be the dramatic success of the year. This strange play taken from Bram Stoker's celebrated novel of the same name is one of the most interesting plays that the stage has offered in a long time. It is novel—well written and presented by a cast of exceptional merit.

"Dracula" is the first one hundred per cent play that has visited here this season. The critics were unanimous in their praise and Ashton Stevens liked it so well that he wrote an editorial the second Sunday of the thrilling moments that he had spent in the Blackstone theatre during the performance of "Dracula." It is different from all other mystery plays, as it deals with the supernatural and there is no awkward or silly explanation at the conclusion. "Dracula" is a play that you should see, if you enjoy a rapidfire procession of thrills of the most astounding hair-raising kind.

A TERRIBLE SITUATION.

Both friends and foes of prohibition—as well as those who occupy a middle position, if there are any such—would do well to ponder seriously over the recent disclosures of drinking by high school children in Chicago.

After a fatal auto accident, it was revealed a party of youngsters had been returning from a six-hour drinking party. A 14-year-old girl who had attended the party was telling the police about it. A startled officer asked her, "What! Do children of your age drink?"

"Sure—don't be silly," the girl replied jauntily. "Act your age. We started out for a high time, and of course we had to have some 'moon'."

There's material, in that situation, to provoke a good deal of serious thought. Conditions of this kind are more deadly than anything else now on our national horizon.

VACCINE SAVES MANY LIVES.

The value of rabies vaccine is shown by a recent statement from Dr. W. E. King, assistant director of the biological department of the Parke-Davis Research Laboratories, who reveals that the lives of more than 12,000 persons were saved by this means during the past year.

Statistics show that the vaccine was administered to 80,000 people during the year. Scientific experience has shown that 18 per cent of the persons treated would have died without the treatment. Hence the figure of 12,000 as the number saved from death.

Rabies, Dr. King points out, has been increasing during the past few years. It is fully as prevalent in cold months as it is in the "dog days" of hot summer.

PUNISHING DRUNKEN HUNTERS.

The Michigan legislature has voted to punish the drunken hunter in the same way that the drunken motorist is now punished. Hereafter, a man carrying a gun while under the influence of liquor will be subject to a stiff fine and a term in jail.

This is an excellent idea, worth copying widely. The idea of providing a stiff punishment for the drunken man who drives an auto is based on recognition of the fact that an auto is an extremely dangerous piece of machinery in the hands of an intoxicated man. Surely the same thing is true of a rifle or shotgun.

OUR DEAD IN SIBERIA.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars, most commendably, are now working to have the bodies of American soldiers who were killed in Siberia returned to this country. It is to be hoped that Congress can see its way clear to have this done.

At the same time, it might be a good thing if the government files were opened so that we could find out exactly why our soldiers went to Siberia at all. Most Americans, probably, have forgotten that we sent an expeditionary force to Asia during and after the war. Just what the force did, why it went there and what led up to its dispatch, are matters covered with more or less mystery. If a little light could be shed on the matter it would be received with gratitude.

THE TINY MITES

STORY BY HAL COCHRAN—PICTURES BY KNOCK

Brave Clowny thought that he knew best. And though it didn't please the rest he poked up at the hornet's nest, believing it a hive. Said he, "I'll knock this to the ground. Come on, you Tinsies, gather round. You all will have the finest treat since you have been alive."

"There's honey in that thing, I'm sure—unless my guess is rather poor. We'll open it and have a feast. How does that sound to you?" Then Scouty said, "I think it's wrong to steal. For that I am not strong. I'd help you if I thought it was the proper thing to do."

The Goofygoos stood back and smiled. And to himself he said, "That child is going to get a big surprise, and it will serve him right. He thinks that he'll find honey there. Instead, he'll find an awful scare. I'm going to be all ready now to run right out of sight."

Then Clowny gave one more poke, and from the tree the queer nest broke. "Ah, here it comes," he shouted. "Now, we'll have a heap of fun. We'll make some sticks right out of wood to eat the honey, if it's good. You all will shortly thank me for the kind thing I have done."

Alas! The nest hit on the ground, and then poor Clowny shortly found that it was filled with hornets, and was not a honey hive. Of course the hornets all were mad. This made the situation bad. In just a moment all the air with hornets was alive.

"Run for your lives," one Tiny cried. "We'll have to find some place to hide." And so the bunch began to run, amid the hornet's din. "If I get stung," one Tiny cried, "I'll make big wets upon my hide." But then the Tinsies reached a stream, and promptly jumped right in.

(The Goofygoos rescues the Tinsies in the next story).

Golf with its give and take will make or break a man of excessive nervous irritability, on account of which it is good medicine, good treatment for nervousness.

A certain man who used a caddy to alibi with and crab at, and who had been known to break his trusty driver over a caddy's head during a sudden fit of temper when the caddy had only spoken out of turn at a moment when "Fore" should have been supreme, found out two things: First, that he did not deserve a caddy, and second, that he should shoot more golf so that practice would make more perfect his self-control in moments of stress—and it worked.

Unless a man takes what he needs more or less constantly—for example, air, nourishment, rest and exercise, and control of the nerves—he will go stale, if not dead. Golf as a form of treatment can be taken, in fact it must be taken, regularly, if the best benefits vs nervousness are to be secured, namely, control of the nerves.

In a recent tournament, a 10 handicap man shot his qualifying round in 96. He freely admitted that he had come out with the avowed purpose of winning the cup, but failed to get in the first flight, all on account of over confidence, which received a terrible setback on the third hole (a par 3), when he took a snappy 9. He recovered his nerve—only after making a horrible example of himself—along about the 14th, and played the remaining 4 holes in 2 under par. He said, "I've learned a lesson and that is never to be too confident and never let my temper get the best of me at golf; but to just laugh off trouble." We are forever learning. That is why golf is a most efficient teacher.

There is a reason for the million or more birth tide golfers of the United States. It tells the story that they are getting more out of the game than simply spending time and money; that they are receiving lessons in fortitude and discipline, and a training in how to take the "rubs" on fairway and green, which are very similar to those of life.

Lack of control of the nerves is nervousness. There are those who think that they "must let the nerves out of the box" every once in a while and some twice in a while. Such folks are not only trying to excuse themselves, but are putting themselves in a bad way practicing non-control, getting the habit of continually losing their nerve balance.

How often should golf be taken for nervousness? The answer, medically speaking, is whenever it is indicated—or a little before.

LINCOLN'S TOMB TO BE CONVERTED INTO MAUSOLEUM

Gov. Emmerson and Architect Plan Remodeling of Structure

Springfield, Ill.—(AP)— Abraham Lincoln's tomb at Springfield is to be converted from a museum to a mausoleum, which will have "all the dignity in keeping with the character of the war president."

Plans for the conversion were revealed by Governor Louis L. Emmerson. State Architect W. H. Hammond, president of the American Institute of Architects, will have charge of the work.

The interior of the tomb will be completely redone. Lincoln relics, papers, pictures, etc., which have been kept in the entrance room of the tomb, will be removed to an undesignated place.

The necessary legislative bill to provide the appropriation of approximately $175,000, will be offered to the legislature next week, with the full support of the Governor behind it.

"We want to make the tomb the beautiful place it should be," Governor Emmerson said.

Many Criticisms
Decision to renovate the structure was indirectly the result of hundreds of letters of criticism. The project has been talked of for many years, but this is the first definite action taken.

The present tomb is a veritable Lincoln museum. While making it clear that he has the greatest respect for the Lincoln collection kept in the entrance room, Governor Emmerson declared he did not think the tomb the proper place for it.

The structure as visualized by the state architect was compared to the tombs of Napoleon and U. S. Grant. Warm marbles will replace the cold stone, he said, and the attempt will be to create an atmosphere of reverence.

Direct To Crypt
Behind the entrance room, the interior of the tomb will be opened into corridors so that visitors may go directly to the Lincoln crypt at the rear.

The mausoleum will not replace the present superstructure, although all the outside of the tomb is to be renovated. It may be necessary to remove the massive shaft to determine what repairs are needed.

Governor Emmerson explained the work is the initial step in a plan to restore and preserve the historical, legendary and scenic assets of the state. Construction of the Lincoln Highway, completion of the Old Salem Log Cabin village where Lincoln lived as a young man, acquisition of the first Lincoln homestead in Illinois, and preservation of the spots with which George Rogers Clark is associated are included in the plan which will be ultimately worked out, he said.

ANNIVERSARY OF DIXON'S GREATEST TRAGEDY

Today is the 56th anniversary of the greatest disaster in the history of Dixon, the collapse of the Trusdale bridge, on May 4, 1873, resulting in the death of 48 residents of this community. There were 200 people on the bridge when it collapsed. Under the weight of a crowd of over 200 who had gathered on it to witness a baseball game, the bridge collapsed. Addie Bovey and Miss Jennie Laing are the only two living Dixonites who were on the bridge on that tragic day.

Toll Rate Suspended

The Illinois Commerce Commission has handed down a ruling suspending the proposed toll rates for the Farmers Telephone Company until November 9th, 1929. The decision is the result of the hearing held in Chicago last Thursday. The telephone company was represented at the hearing by George W. Schafer, general manager and Clayton Bowers, treasurer. L. J. Quasey of Springfield, attorney for the Illinois Agricultural Association, is representing the Lee County Farm Bureau in its fight to prevent the Farmer's Telephone Company from charging toll to all stations in Lee County not operated by the Farmers' Company. Those who attended the hearing on Thursday were Chas. E. Yale, farm advisor of Amboy, William Herbst of Franklin Grove, A. F. Jeablane of Lee Center, and John J. Wagner of Ashton, former director of the company.

A Fitting Tribute.

The following tribute to Miss Harriet Thomas, a former resident of this place, will be read with interest by her many friends both at this place and Dixon. For a number of years she has been associated with several charity institutions at Newport, R. I. The minutes adopted by the Family Welfare Society of that city follows: "Harriet E. Thomas served this society for over twenty-five years. During this time her executive ability, her kindly spirit and her civic consciousness have left an immeasurable imprint on the community. While she guided the destinies of this society, the whole structure of the social work was undergoing a tremendous change. From the vision of a few idealist social work has become an integral part of our present complex civilization."

During this transition period, Miss Thomas kept abreast of the best thought of the times. She was identified with all the forward movements in this city and her enthusiasm and judgment will be missed by those who knew her. The Family Welfare Society, which was more to her than a duty, wishes to express its profound sorrow for the loss of its faithful guide."

Young Woman Denies Killing Aged Lover

South Paris, Me., May 3.—(UP)—Accompanied by her two young children, one of them an infant, Mrs. Anna Merrill Welch, 26, pleaded not guilty today to murdering her lover, Elthu H. Turner, 75-year-old farmer. She was held without bail for the grand jury.

Turner's body, charred and headless, was found in the ruins of his barn after a fire last week. The state contends the young woman, jealous of Turner's friendship for a former housekeeper, hacked him to death with an axe and set the fire.

and 10

THE life of man—but three score years and 10 are just an incident in the life of a Johns-Manville asbestos roof. It is permanent—as everlasting as the rock from which it was mined.

And besides permanence, this roof offers you fireproofness, colorful beauty. Even white heat will not burn it. Sun will not fade it. The severest weather cannot harm it.

Let us tell you how little it costs to roof your new house, or re-roof your present house once for all, with Johns-Manville Asbestos Shingles.

FRANKLIN GROVE WON TRACK MEET AT COMPTON FRI.

Rollo, Usual Winners, are Outpointed by Boys from Franklin

Franklin Grove high school athletes made it a walk away at the annual track and field meet of the Green River Valley high school conference yesterday afternoon at Compton. Rollo, who in past seasons has held the championship, trailed behind Franklin Grove yesterday and was content with second place, Compton taking third.

Chill weather and a heavy wind failed to slow up the contending athletes and a number of new records were established. Phillips of Franklin Grove was the sensation in the dashes and proved to be the fastest contender that has yet appeared in the conference meet. An effort is being made to have Phillips enter in the district high school meet at Dixon's north side athletic field a week from today.

Leslie Corwin of Compton was referee and starter of the events. Coach Barton of Paw Paw being official timer. Coach Morrison of Rollo was judge of events, Coach Blaser of Lee Center judging the jumps and Prof. Thompson of Compton being clerk of the course. The high schools competing in the meet were Franklin Grove, Rollo, Compton, Paw Paw, Lee Center and Steward.

Summary

The results of the meet were as follows:

50 yard dash—Phillips, Franklin Grove, first; Kehm, Compton, second; Reynolds, Paw Paw, third. Time—5.04. (Record tied.)

THE SCOREBOARD

BY UNITED PRESS

Yesterday's hero: George Uhle, Detroit pitcher, who held the Chicago White Sox to five hits and snapped a four game winning streak at Chicago, 6 to 1.

The game was the only regularly scheduled contest in either league, rain, wet grounds and cold weather forcing the cancellation of all others.

The White Sox took a one run lead in the first inning and Detroit tied the count in the second. The winning run came in the sixth, followed by another in the seventh. In the ninth, with a man on base, Gehring hit a home run, the 101st of the 1929 major league season.

Although frowning on championship competition generally, the weather man permitted the New York Yankees to lose an exhibition at Pittsburgh by an 8 to 2 count. Gordon Rhodes started for the Yankees and allowed Pittsburgh six runs before he was replaced by Johnson in the fifth. Meadows and Fussell held the Yankees to eight hits.

22 YANKS WILL COMPETE FOR BRITISH TITLE

Hope to Retain Open Golf Championship of Great Britain

Muirfield, Scotland, May 4.—(AP)—Twenty-two Americans hope to make their presence felt in the British open golf championship, starting here Monday. If three or four don't finish among the first ten there will be grounds for considerable amazement in the United States and joy, perhaps, in Great Britain.

With a field of 242 to be cut down to about 80, some of the Americans probably will confine their competition exclusively to the qualifying round of 36 holes, 18 of which are to be played on Monday and 18 on Tuesday. Medal play will begin Wednesday and continue through Thursday and the last 36 on Friday.

With such stars as George Duncan, Abie Mitchell, Archie Compston and Charles Whitcomb among the professionals and T. P. Perkins, the British amateur title-holder, as well as other leading amateurs, Great Britain hopes to keep the championship in her own borders this year, and at the same time break a five-year American monopoly on England's greatest golfing honor.

That looms as something of a task, however, when such American stars as Walter Hagen, Leo Diegel, Gene Sarazen, Horton Smith, Johnny Farrell, Wild Bill Mehlhorn, Tommy Armour, MacDonald Smith, professionals, and George Von Elm, former United States amateur champion, will be furnishing the opposition. Other American professionals entered include Johnny Golden, Al Watrous, Joe Turnesa, Al Espinosa, Ed Dudley, Jim Barnes and Bobby Cruikshank.

SPORT BRIEFS

BY UNITED PRESS

Iowa City, Ia.—Notre Dame defeated the University of Iowa baseball team, 7-2, as a result of tight pitching by Oscar Rust. Rust allowed but three hits until the ninth inning when the Hawkeyes reached him for two runs.

Detroit—Gus Sonnenberg, former University of Detroit football star and Dartmouth College athlete, defeated Howard Canawine, Iowa grappler, in a bone crushing wrestling match last night. Sonnenberg floored his opponent in 49 minutes. Canawine was so badly injured he could not continue the contest.

St. Louis, Mo.—Davey Abad of Panama won all but three rounds of his ten-round bout with Eddie "Cannonball" Martin, of Brooklyn, here last night.

Milwaukee—Clear but decidedly chilly weather greeted 1,000 athletes today for the seventh annual Marquette University high school relay carnival.

Eighty schools in the United States and Canada sent prep school stars to the meet.

The carnival, which includes 40 events, has been divided into three sections, including national championships, private schools championships and Wisconsin Class B championships.

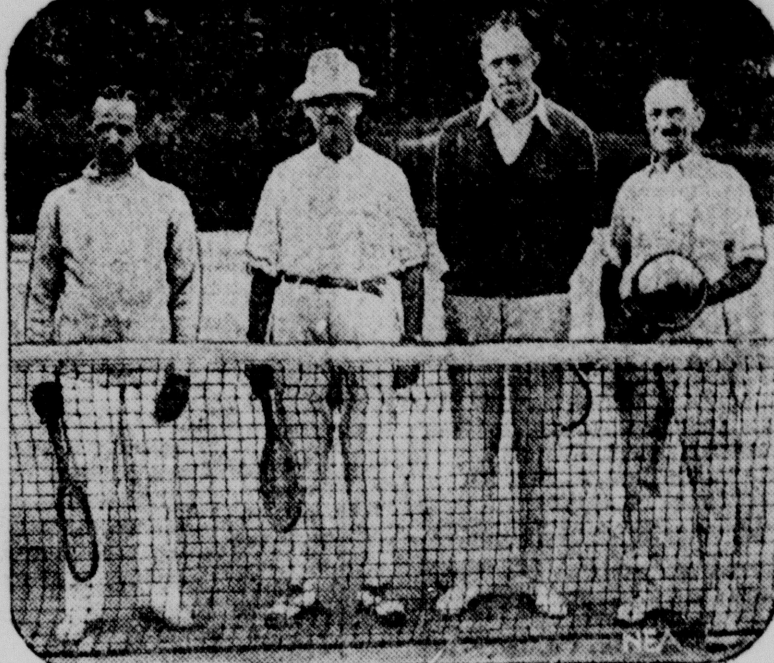

Aside from Wisconsin sizeable delegations were entered from Illinois, Indiana, Iowa and from Ontario, Canada.

Clinton, Ia.—Entries from 42 Iowa and Illinois high schools were to try for new marks today in the seventh annual "Gateway Classic" at Coan field here. Charles Brookins, of the Iowa coaching staff, who will act as starter of the meet, will run an exhibition hurdle race.

Derby, Conn.—Smooth water and clear skies awaited the crews of Yale, Pennsylvania and Columbia who were to race over the Housatonic river course late today in their annual triangular regatta.

Experts predicted Ed Leader's husky Yale varsity would have the

Tennis at the White House

Tennis is the favorite sport of several of the members of President Hoover's cabinet and almost any day one or more of the cabinet men takes up a racket and plays in the rear of the White House. Here are shown left to right, Dr. Joel Boone, physician to the president; Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson; Carl Schuneman, assistant secretary of the treasury, and Dr. L. S. Rowe, of the Pan-American Union.

Hooks and Slides

AND MEBBE SHE WON'T

Some kind of a world's record must be given to Gienna Collett, the charming young golfer. She is on the records as a good-looking and charming young lady who can play a woe game of golf and she is rated among the players as a great sports-woman.

But she proved herself to be also a magnificent handler of the truth when she went to England recently. She made the journey to compete in the British women's championship and when she arrived she was submitted to an interview by the London newspapermen who meet the boats.

They asked her, in the prying way that ship news reporters have, who was going to win the championship. And, for them, she gave an amazing answer.

It is the custom for American athletes who go to foreign shores to answer the same stock question in a fashion something like this—"Who's going to win? Such a silly question. I'm going to knock those limpies for a goal. I'm the new champion. Mitt me."

But Miss Collett violated all the traditions. When she was asked who was going to win the title she said: "Miss Joyce Wethered, your star, should win the title. She is the greatest golfer in the world. As for my chances, well—I'll just be in there trying."

IT MEANS THE MOST

It must have been something of a private shock when Miss Collett learned on the boat that Miss Wethered had decided to renounce retirement and enter championship competition again. The American girl has had her heart set for years on the British championship. She has won about all there is to be won in American competition, but the best of American records do not compare to the prestige of winning one of the British championships. Her previous efforts failed and she announced when she sailed on this voyage that it would be her last.

She figured she had the title clinched in 1926, but the general labor strike came along in England and forced such a long postponement of the tournament that she had to return home without playing.

LET'S REVERSE IT

Miss Collett and Miss Wethered met four years ago for the title and the British girl won four and three with an amazing exhibition of skill. The match was the feature news event of the day and it attracted an immense gallery.

The crowd got out of hand and almost trampled the two players. Miss Collett, less temperamental than her opponent, bore the inconvenience better. Perhaps she was more accustomed to crowds.

After the match had been completed Miss Wethered criticized the British officials bitterly and announced that she never would engage in championship competition again. And she lived up to her threat until this year.

hardest battle since the University of Washington carmen came to New Haven, Columbia, by reason of its victory over the Navy, was even money to defeat the Elis.

ILLINOIS HOPES TO STOP MARCH OF BADGER NINE

Their Game Main One on Card of Big Ten Today

Chicago, May 4.—(AP)—A revengeful Illinois team today blocked Wisconsin's unbroken march toward the Big Ten baseball championship.

Smartering under a pair of defeats by Northwestern, which virtually eliminated them from the race, the Illini were to tackle the undefeated Badgers at Urbana in the outstanding battle of today's four-game card.

Victory for the Badgers would give them a two-game edge over their only undefeated rival, Michigan, while defeat would give the Wolverines, 1928 champions, undisputed possession of first place with one victory. A brilliant pitching duel was in prospect with Captain Don Andrews hurling for the Illini and Maury Farber slugging for Wisconsin, which has conquered Indiana and Chicago.

Holding second interest today was the all-Hoosier skirmish between Purdue and Indiana at Bloomington. Indiana has won three out of four, while the Boilermakers have dropped two out of five and third place in the Big Ten standings was at stake.

Ohio State invaded Chicago and Northwestern's "giant killers" were at Iowa in the other games. Of these teams, only Iowa, twice defeated, was considered to have a mathematical chance in the race.

Forrest Twoogood, who has struck out 20 men in 19 innings this season, was slated to hurl for Iowa today.

CARDS' MANAGER IN SOLE CONTROL OF HIS PLAYERS

Southworth Following the Tactics He Used at Rochester

BY GEORGE KIRKSEY.
United Press Staff Correspondent
New York, May 4.—(UP)—Managing the St. Louis Cardinals—a job which Hornsby, O'Farrell and McKechnie found too much for them—is no different from running a Class AA pennant winner to Billy Southworth.

Southworth, who has what many consider the toughest job in baseball as manager of the 1928 National League champions, is using the same system he used to win the International League at Rochester last season.

"I have no strict rules," the National League's youngest manager said. "In bed at 12. Practice in the morning for the players who are not to play that day when we are at home. Twenty-five cent limit on poker games. All our rules are about the same as any club has."

"I try to use common sense in every decision. I will not tolerate any player who quits. Hustling every minute wins ball games. That's the way to expect to win them. I couldn't expect any better spirit."

"Today's game is what counts. I send my team out to win that game. Yesterday and tomorrow don't count. If this system finds us on top at the end of the season, it will be the fulfillment of all my desires and ambition—manage a major league pennant winner."

Southworth said that he had entire charge of making every decision regarding the play of the Cardinals on the field.

"It is folly to try to predict anything about baseball," he said. "We can play better ball than we've shown, although I'm not disappointed with what we've done so far. As soon as we start hitting we'll be a tougher team to beat. Our pitchers are in good shape and they'll keep us going until we regain our hitting strength."

Southworth characterized the Cubs as "a strong, hustling, fighting team." Hornsby has given the Cubs added confidence, Southworth believes.

KARL EITEL

Karl Eitel is one of the entries of Alderman John Coughlin, who is known stable mate. He started nine times last season, won five races, was the winter books and was not as highly favored as Roughish Eye, his better known in Chicago as "Bath House John." Karl Eitel was listed 70 to 1 in second twice and unlabeled twice and earned $21,470 in pure money. Smart candidates have been watching the preparatory work of the Derby candidates have expressed the opinion that the Eitel colt is working better than Roughish Eye and that he may be the lone starter from the Coughlin stable.

CHICAGO RACE SEASON OPENS AFTER STRIKE

Compromise Reached at Aurora Allows the Meet to Start

Aurora, Ill., May 4.—(AP)—Chicago's spring racing season, delayed three days by a horsemen's strike, opened at Aurora track today.

The strike ended suddenly late yesterday in a compromise just as it appeared as though the deadlock would cause continued postponement. Both factions claimed a victory.

Under terms of agreement, the track management consented to collect one per cent of the purse money won by any owner, who makes an individual assignment of that share of his purse to the horsemen's association.

Those who do not make such an assignment will receive the full amount of money their horses win. The strikers originally demanded the track make a blanket deduction of one per cent of all first moneys.

The track management granted one point by making a slight increase in purses. For the first seven days, the daily distribution of prize money will total $6,000. For the remainder of the meeting, there will be a daily distribution of $6,000. The track originally had offered two $1,000 races and five $800 races each day, but after the first week of the new season the daily program will include five $1,000 races and two at $800.

Apples, pears, plums and other tree fruits are grown in commercial quantities in Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Quebec, Ontario and British Columbia.

There are 55,563 cows under regular test for production in California.

In all but two of the last fourteen years the world rainfall has been below the average.

Seek New Endurance Mark

An attempt to break the record of the tri-motored army plane, Question Mark, of 151 hours in the air is to be made by two Fort Worth, Tex., flyers. The single motored Ryan monoplane (shown here) will be piloted by Reg Robins (upper right) with James Kelley (upper left) as relief pilot. The ship will be refueled in the air from another plane piloted by Captain Bill Ponder.

It Comes Apart in Midair

NEA San Francisco Bureau

On long trips too much time is lost by refueling and motor repair, says J. S. Abreu, San Francisco cabinet maker, so he has invented a plane that drops its engine and fuel tank in mid-air and comes to earth as a glider for a new engine and fuel tank to be hooked on immediately. A single lever controls the work of separating the plane into two sections and a parachute lands the motor gently. Above is the new craft and at the right is Pilot Reed Vowles, chosen to make the first experimental flight. The arrow shows where the plane separates. With his ship, says Abreu, it would be possible to load a cargo in New York, seal it, change motors several times and avoid all delay caused by refueling.

TOO SHOCKING

London—A story out of Sunderland is about a minister who sat opposite a very nice young girl, with short skirts, in a street car. He requested the young lady to cover up her exposed knees. The young lady, embarrassed, acted on the advice of others in the car, and refused. The minister appealed to the conductor requesting him to put the girl off the car. The conductor replied: "I see much worse sights every day of my life. I can't put her off the car for that." The girl stayed on the car but the minister got off.

DIDN'T LOOK ENOUGH

London—The American flapper is reforming. Sir Charles Higham, recently returned from a trip to the states, says: "The shingle is out of fashion and I saw no bare knees in New York. American girls do not dirt. The glad eye has disappeared. Every girl in New York seems to own a fur coat. Sir Charles had a good word for our liquor in a statement that: 'The liquor is as good in New York as in London and seems more plentiful.'"

THIS HAS HAPPENED
MILDRED LAWRENCE falls in love with STEPHEN ARMITAGE, who is lured away from her by PAMELA JUDSON when she tells him that Mildred is trying to marry her brother, HAROLD, for his money. Harold fears HUCK CONNOR, who holds a check which he forged. Huck is infatuated with Pamela, who plays him to make Stephen jealous. When Pamela maneuvers Stephen into an engagement, but Mildred goes to see him in jail and promises help. Harold has confessed to Mildred that he feared Huck and that he had threatened to "get Armitage" to keep him from marrying Pamela. With this as a clue, she determines to force Harold to help her. Stephen and is shocked to hear of his death—apparently accidental. She tells Stephen her suspicions but they have no proof. Mildred goes to see Harold's father, Mildred goes to Pamela and tells her story about Huck, demanding that she help try to clear Stephen. Pamela takes her to see Stephen, who still believes she was scheming to marry Harold for money.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XXXV

MILDRED returned Mr. Judson's piercing glance with one of total blankness. She had no idea what he was talking about.

"The wide-eyed innocent role," he commented to himself, but aloud he said: "No doubt Pamela has told you that I have offered a reward for the apprehension of my son's murderer. The police will not permit me to make it public, but it stands. I presume you've come to claim it."

The blankness faded rapidly from Mildred's face and gave way to an expression of passionate indignation.

"Are you so sure I know something about Harold's death because I told Pamela so or do you think it only natural that I should know?" she flamed.

Mr. Judson met her question with a grim remark. "If I suspected you knew it wouldn't have been necessary for you to come to me," he retorted.

"But you have no more right to believe I came for the reward than to suspect me of being an accomplice of the murderer," Mildred returned promptly. "You know I tried to see you, begged to see you. I didn't wait for a reward to be offered."

Mr. Judson nodded. "That's true," he said; "but surely you're aware of the reason why you were discharged from my employ? Your attempt to see me could have but one meaning in view of that reason."

This visit, I am frank to say, I still attribute to a wish to claim the reward. Now, if you have any information that will lead to the arrest of the murderer I shall be as willing to pay the money to you as to anyone else."

Mildred looked at him steadily, though her eyes misted with smarting tears.

"I know that Pamela influenced you when you ordered me fired," she replied, "but I don't know what she said. Anyway, it doesn't matter now. If you had consented to see me earlier it might have been easier to arrest the man who killed Harold. Now we don't know where to find him."

"We? Are you speaking of the police?"

"Of course not. I couldn't go to them because I had no evidence, but I thought you might be able to get it. I mean Stephen Armitage, the young man your daughter is engaged to marry."

MR. JUDSON half rose from his chair. "What?" he shouted.

Mildred rushed on before he could say more. "He's in prison because the man who killed Harold put him there by framing up an automobile theft on him so he'd be out of the way."

"What are you talking about?" Mr. Judson gasped weakly, sinking back in his chair.

Mildred began at the beginning and told him. However, she said nothing of Pamela's jealousy of her, so that Mr. Judson was left to believe that Pamela had told the truth about her interest in Harold.

When Mildred finished her story he said to her: "And why is it that you don't drop all this? Be honest now; do you expect to gain anything from your relations with my son?"

"Oh," Mildred cried, "do you think I can let an innocent man stay in prison without trying to help him?"

"There are many men in prison who haven't yet been proved guilty. What is this young man to you?"

Mildred's eyes lied for her nobly. "He's a friend of my family," she said simply. "And when everyone deserted him I did what I could to help him. But Harold wouldn't let me tell about Huck Connor. You see, I'd been deliberately encouraging Harold to tell me what was wrong. I suspected Huck Connor was at the bottom of it. After leading Harold on I couldn't betray his confidence."

"Was that your sole interest in my son?"

"Of course it was. I knew something was troubling him dreadfully. I wanted to help him."

"And you say this young man—Stephen Armitage—is nothing more to you than a family friend?"

Mildred understood his insinuation.

"I tried to make Harold talk before Stephen got in trouble," she said defensively. "It was for his own sake, not Stephen's."

MR. JUDSON nodded. "Doesn't it appear to you that your interest in my son could have been misunderstood?" he asked.

"I suppose it might," Mildred agreed, "if there had been anyone to care. But no one seemed even to notice that he was going to pieces! Oh, I'm sorry," she cried in the next breath as she saw a look of anguish settle over the father's countenance.

"I'm afraid," he said a moment later, "that I've done you a grave injustice, Miss Lawrence. I understood that your relations with Harold were quite different from what you have told me. But I acknowledge my mistake and humbly beg your pardon."

Mildred was touched by the sight of this man, so powerful in his own world, apologizing to her in such a simple and wholehearted manner. Impulsively she reached out a hand. He took it.

"And now," he said, "I shall have to ask you to repeat your story, my dear, to Inspector Markeson. Your information will prove to be of inestimable value to us in the event your surmises of Connor's guilt are correct. You see, we have a clue to the murderer."

Mildred began to tremble with excitement. "What is it?" she cried.

Mr. Judson told her about the thumbprint on the belt buckle.

"If we can find Connor we shall soon know whether he is the guilty man," he said.

"Oh, you must!" Mildred declared. "I know he's guilty. We've got to get Stephen out of jail."

"Well, that at least is beyond doubt," Mr. Judson agreed.

Mildred's heart leaped high. "You will help him?" she said tremulously.

"I'll do all I can for him."

"Will you bail him out?"

"The very first thing! I'm certain he can't be guilty."

"Then will you do it at once?" Mildred urged. "You've no idea how terrible it is for him there."

"I'm afraid it's more important for you to see Inspector Markeson first," Mr. Judson demurred.

"All right," Mildred consented. "But let's not waste time. Anyway I think Pamela is going to see Stephen now."

MR. JUDSON frowned.

And the frown remained on his face most of the way to police headquarters.

Mildred guessed that he was displeased with Pamela's engagement, but she had no doubt that Pamela would finally win his consent, as she had won all else she wanted.

At police headquarters Mildred again went over her story, answering innumerable questions, many of which seemed quite irrelevant to her.

When Inspector Markeson finished with her and she left with Mr. Judson to act for Stephen's release, certain telephone wires in the city were buzzing with the news of her visit to headquarters.

Back came terse, definite orders and from that moment on Mildred became a marked person.

Mr. Judson insisted that she remain with him while he went through the red tape of putting up bonds for Stephen, but when it came to going to the jail she declined.

Perhaps Pamela would be there, she thought.

"I must get back to my work. If I still have a job," she explained to her companion. "I've forgotten to telephone."

"Never mind," Mr. Judson assured her. "You'd only have to resign anyway. You're coming back to your old place at the hotel. With an increase in salary. Besides, you know, you may get the reward."

Mildred shook her head. She couldn't think of going back to where she'd see Stephen and Pamela together. Neither could she think of accepting a reward for helping to apprehend Harold's murderer. Somehow she felt as though her insistence in making him talk had helped to bring about his end.

"Thank you, Mr. Judson," she said simply, "but I'm well satisfied where I am. And I think they'll want me to remain when I explain what has kept me away this afternoon."

"We'll see; we'll see," Mr. Judson returned, not wishing to argue the matter on the spot. "Shall I send you up in my car?"

"Oh no, the subway's quicker," Mildred replied. "I know you're going to like Stephen," she added, smiling pathetically. "But there's one thing more I'd like to say to you before you take him out of jail."

"Yes?" Mr. Judson was watching her closely, puzzled by her manner. Beneath its surface casualness he sensed a deeper feeling.

"I think Stephen will be in danger the moment he is free," Mildred astonished him by saying.

"You do?"

MILDRED nodded, and almost unconsciously glanced over her shoulder. As she did so a man a few doors down the street quickly turned his head and bent a closer inspection upon the display of ties in a haberdasher's window.

Mildred did not notice him. Her action, inspired by a general fear, was not influenced by any definite idea that she herself might be in danger.

"Huck wanted him put in jail," she reminded Mr. Judson. "It won't suit his plans to have him out."

Mr. Judson's lips tightened.

"You mean his plan to marry my daughter?" he asked.

"Yes."

"But surely not even such a murderous scoundrel as he could consider such a thing now," Mr. Judson proclaimed. "He must be a man, after all, to have got himself on friendly terms with Pamela."

"She probably thought it a lark to know him," Mildred guessed astutely. "But I'll admit he doesn't look like a beast. Still I think he will try to get what he wants. And one thing he wants is Stephen out of the way. You will warn him, Mr. Judson, won't you?"

"Don't you expect to see him yourself?"

There was a quizzical light in the glance he bent upon her as he asked the question, and there was more behind the question itself than Mildred guessed.

"Oh, I'm pretty busy," she said evasively. "He doesn't need me now. But I wish you'd promise me to warn him that he must be careful."

"I will," Mr. Judson promised. "I'll do better than that."

STORY OF MOUND BUILDERS TOLD BY OLD RELICS

Curator of Illinois University Tells Academy of Science Tale

Macomb, Ill.—(AP)—Armed with a miniature pick and hammer, a man roamed the foothills of southern Illinois. He poked about here and there where the topography was dotted with strange humps and hills unique in their irregularity of contour. Into the mysterious leather pouch that he carried were carefully placed a beautifully notched purple shell, a needle-like bone, and a quantity of teeth of the black bear.

Frank C. Baker, curator of the University of Illinois museum, laid these objects before members of the Illinois Academy of Science, in session here for their 22nd annual meeting, and pieced together a story of Indian mound builders that frequented the Cahokia and Havana regions many years ago.

Reconstructing the Indians' everyday life from the objects found in their mounds or burial places, Baker explained that a large shell with the inner whorls removed had been a dipper, that the pointed piece of bone was a needle, the clam shell with the large perforation a hoe for tilling the soil, and the purple shells the ornament for the ear of some mound builder.

It was a weird tale, but a precise one, that the University of Illinois scientist told. By classifying the shells, trinkets and bones, he pictured a primitive people, whose women did a great part of the tilling of the fields and all of the domestic work, while the men were hunting and fighting.

Hunting doubtless furnished a large part of the meat supply, which consisted of deer, raccoon, and possum among mammals and such birds as the wild turkey, ducks, geese and other large species, Baker said. Fishing was carried on and even turtles and frogs formed a part of the diet.

River mussels formed a large part of the food supply, for the shells of these clams were found either scattered or forming large masses of kitchen refuse. Whether or not the great bison was used for food cannot be determined from the bone relics, Baker declared as only the teeth and horns of very young animals have this far been found.

Versatile in their activities, the Indians found deer and other animals useful for supplying the raw material for many artifacts and implements, Baker reported. The bones of the Virginia deer were especially well adapted for the making of tools. The heel bone made an excellent awl or punch, the flat posterior end forming a handle. The arm bone and the lower jaw also were fashioned into punches.

Personal adornment was evidently considered as much of a virtue among the mound builders as it is among the belles and swains of today, Baker said. "Some of this was probably simply for the enhancing of the personal charms of the wearer, but, among the men at least, it also undoubtedly indicated the standing of the individual in the tribe with regard to his personal bravery, either in conquering some wild animal or in victory in warfare."

Young Husband Admits Bride's Torch Murder

Earl P. Peacock, center, 21-year-old radio repairman, confessed to strangling to death his estranged wife in New York on the first anniversary of their marriage and then hiding her body and burning it with kerosene in a woods near Greenburg, N. Y. Peacock is shown above in the custody of Police Lieut. Herman Mattes, right, and Captain Silverstein after admitting the "torch murder."

Havana group, great numbers of canine teeth of the black bear were found in connection with burials. The teeth were either whole or split longitudinally and all were pierced with one or more holes for suspension about the neck as a necklace. As many as fifty of these teeth were found in one grave, indicating that the owner, possibly a chief, had killed some twelve bears. As the killing was done with primitive weapons, arrows or spears, this feat is to be ranked as one worthy of note.

Although no domestic animals such as have been used by modern Indians have been found in the mounds, Baker said that the skull of a domesticated Indian dog, the first ever found in Illinois, was discovered along with the cut and squared lower jaw of a human being. Both were pierced with two holes apparently for suspension at the end of a necklace.

The culture of the group is indicated by the pottery that was found, Baker said. An Indian outline head, made from the flat side of a pink heel-splitter mussel, was uncovered in the Sawmill mound. Another object of art, a beautifully worked ear pendant retained its bright purple color after even through its burial for some four hundred years.

Pat Crowe Ordered to Leave New York

New York, May 3—(UP)—Pat Crowe, who once kidnapped the son of Edward Cudahy, meat packer, had orders today to leave New York City for good.

He received a suspended sentence in night court for soliciting alms, on the promise of leaving for Chicago before tonight. Crowe, 60, said he has a son and daughter in Chicago and that a friend here had offered to pay his fare.

"TAD", FAMOUS CARTOONIST, IS HEART VICTIM

Sport Critic and Coiner of Slang Died in His Sleep

New York, May 3—(AP)—Private funeral services for Thomas Aloysius (Tad) Dorgan, noted newspaper cartoonist, will be held next Monday. "Tad" died in his sleep at his home in Great Neck, Long Island, yesterday from a heart ailment that kept him confined to his home for the past seven years.

Coiner of Slang
Although one of the most capable of sport critics, especially on boxing, "Tad's" clientele was by no means restricted to followers of the sports pages. As a coin of slang, he had few, if any, equals. Through his daily cartoons he originated scores of new expressions which quickly caught the popular fancy.

Out of his fertile brain came "twenty three, skidoo," "yes, we have no bananas," "hard-boiled egg," "dumb Dora," "finale hopper," "drug-store cowboy," "apple sauce," "cake eater," "the cat's meow," "nickel nurse," "nobody home," "the first hundred years are the hardest," "for cryin' out loud," "you tell 'em," and literally scores of other slang expressions that have crept into everyday use. He it was who first termed an overcoat a "ben-ny," and called feet "dogs."

Someone recently paid $51,000 for an especially desirable autograph of Button Gwinnett, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence.

The charred body of a young woman discovered in a woods near Greenburg, N. Y., was later identified as that of pretty Mrs. Dorothy Peacock, above, of New York City. Police confronted her estranged husband, Earl P. Peacock, of Mt. Vernon, N. Y., with a kerosene stained suit found in his apartment, and obtained his confession that he had strangled his wife to death after an attempt at reconciliation had failed, had hidden her body and later returned to the spot and set it afire.

Illinois Peaches Escaped Damage

Springfield, Ill., May 3—(AP)—Peaches in southern Illinois commercial orchard areas escaped all frost damage last night, reports to the division of Markets of the Illinois Department of Agriculture said this morning. Reports also said the hail storm of May 1 crossed southern Illinois but scarcely touched the orchard areas.

Barring severe weather in the next few days, strawberry production will surpass the 1928 figure, judging from the demands for state inspection service, the Division of Markets announced. Requests on file for inspection at loading points, in the extreme southern part of the state, have already surpassed all expectations of the inspection staff.

It is expected the 1929 strawberry crop will start moving to market in car load lots about May 10. The crop will approximate 400 car loads. Last year it was 324 car loads.

One hundred dollars monthly invested at six per cent compound interest will grow in 25 years to $62,977.15.

Store He Managed Will be Continued: Will Take New Line

Amboy, Ill.—Sidney J. Eichler will leave Amboy about the middle of this month to become associated with the J. G. Kline company, owners of a chain of large dry goods stores throughout the country. Mr. Eichler will go to Galesburg to assist with the work of operating the Kline store in that city for a while and will then locate in Lorraine, Ohio, a town of 50,000 about 40 miles from Cleveland where Mrs. Eichler's parents reside.

The Eichler Bros. store in Amboy will continue in business for the present and Miss Minnie Johnson will have charge.

Mr. Eichler has been giving consideration to this move for a number of months. He has been a resident of Amboy for more than five years, the Eichler store here having been opened in March of 1924. During his five years residence in Amboy, he has been extremely active in all civic affairs and especially in work related to the Commercial club.

Mr. Eichler has been secretary, treasurer and president of that organization and has been a member of the board of directors practically every year. He has been actively engaged in financial solicitation work for the Boy Scouts and has been constantly attentive to many matters having to do with community betterment and progress. He has devoted much of his time unselfishly and enthusiastically for the benefit of this community.

Amboy will feel keenly the loss of the Eichlers both from a business and social standpoint and the wishes of scores of close friends made during their years of living here, as well as the wishes of this whole community will go with them for much future success and happiness.

Mrs. Eichler and children expect to leave for Cleveland as soon as Mr. Eichler takes up his new duties at Galesburg. He expects to be given a number of weeks experience in several Illinois Kline stores before going to Lorraine.

Definite plans of procedure will be drafted at that time and it is likely the committee will hold its first session in Aurora the following Friday.

Speaker Shanahan said his only instruction to the committee will be to make a fair and impartial investi-
